Tonight a telegram was called to my attention, stating that Burnham expected to leave British Guiana on March 11 to visit Washington.

We dined tonight at the Columbia Club, with General and Mrs. Ives. I sat next to charming Mrs. Amery, Harold Macmillan's daughter, and had a good talk afterwards with her attractive husband, Julian.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE A/CDC/MR
REVIEWED BY PEL DATE 6-17-81
PORTIONS DENIED AS INDICATED

March 1, 1962 - Thursday

Marian Schlesinger left this morning for Washington, but Arthur is remaining with us another day or two. Leonard Carmichael, President of the Smithsonian, came to see me. He has been in Egypt, looking into the question of preserving the monumental structures due to be inundated when the Aswan Dam is completed. He questions the advisability, or the possibility, of raising the 75 million dollars necessary to protect the great statues at Abou Simbel.

This morning Hugh Gaitskell went to the residence to talk to about 200 of the Embassy ladies. It was said to be a great success. Kurt von Reventlow called there to see Evangeline, and have a look at his former house, the construction and furnishing of which appears to have been more his work than that of his then wife, Barbara. He expressed surprise that the swimming pool had not been put in